SYT DESTINATION MANAGEMENT POLICY

1. Animal Welfare

1.1. The following activities are deemed unacceptable in any eco-tourism experience:

- Activities involving captive wild animals.
- Unsustainable hunting or fishing practices.
- Activities involving public cruelty (e.g., bear baiting, bullfighting, cockfighting, ritual slaughter, etc.).
- Activities involving provocation or stimulation of animals (e.g., bull runs, crocodile wrestling, etc.).
- Administering drugs to animals for non-medical purposes.
- Farms with poor welfare standards where wild animals are bred for commercial products (e.g., tiger, reptile, turtle, or civet farms).
- Consumption of endangered or threatened animal species at local or global levels.
- Animal shows or performances involving wild animals.
- Improperly confined animals used for display, decoration, or attraction in tourism sites, restaurants, or accommodations.
- Handling, touching, or any close interaction with wild animals (e.g., holding or feeding tiger/lion cubs, monkeys, sloths for selfies; riding ostriches; petting tigers; or walking with
- lions).
- Animals used for begging (e.g., snake charmers, dancing bears, chained primates).

1.2. For sanctuaries and conservation centers (including rescue or working animal facilities), it must be ensured that they:

- Possess all relevant legal licenses.
- Are genuine sanctuaries or conservation programs.

- Maintain animals in good conditions aligned with internationally recognized welfare standards.
- Do not perform surgeries or body modifications on animals' skin, tissues, teeth, or bones except for legitimate medical reasons (e.g., feather clipping, nail trimming, or safe muzzling).
- For working animals: they must be healthy, not overloaded, provided with sufficient water and rest, and kept in proper housing when off duty.

1.3. When taking tourists to observe wildlife, it must be ensured that:

- Visitors keep a safe and respectful distance and avoid loud noise.
- There is no physical contact, chasing, or harassment of wildlife.
- Feeding of wild animals is strictly prohibited.
- Collection or sale of protected or endangered flora and fauna or their derived products is not permitted.
- When participating in coral-watching or diving, visitors must follow safety guidelines, avoid stepping on or breaking coral.

2. Child Welfare

2.1 The following activities are deemed unacceptable in eco-tourism experiences:

- Employment of child labor.
- Visits to schools or orphanages that disrupt children's learning.
- Organized visits to schools or orphanages without optional participation for visitors.
- Involvement of children in tourism without their and their guardian's consent.
- Photographing children without consent from both the child and their parent/guardian.

2.2 When children naturally take part in tourism experiences (e.g., homestays or community visits), it must be ensured that:

- Consent is obtained from both the child and parents for each organized visit.
- Host families in communities establish and communicate codes of conduct for visitors.
- Children understand their rights and are aware of acceptable and unacceptable behavior from visitors.

Special Requirement:

All personnel and travelers involved in such experiences must undergo national or equivalent criminal background checks to ensure they have no prior convictions that would make them unsuitable for community-based tourism—particularly sexual, violent, or child-related offenses.

3. Environmental Sustainability

Environmental sustainability is the core of all eco-tourism activities conducted in protected and conservation areas.

3.1 The following activities must be avoided:

- Violations of the regulations of protected or conservation areas.
- Activities causing air, water, or soil pollution by introducing harmful materials or waste affecting public health.
- Tourism-driven activities leading to ecosystem degradation (e.g., deforestation).
- Excessive use of single-use plastics.
- Overuse of natural resources that could result in depletion or scarcity for local communities.

3.2 The following activities are encouraged:

- Always comply with the management and development plans of the protected areas.
- Adhere strictly to all rules and objectives set by the protected areas.
- Follow the "Reduce, Reuse, Recycle" model to minimize environmental impact.
- Properly manage waste through local systems.
- Regularly monitor natural environments and apply adaptive management when necessary.
- Ensure all service suppliers (restaurants, accommodations, transport providers, tour operators, etc.) meet environmental sustainability criteria.
- Share information on park regulations, designated routes, and destination development objectives with visitors.
- Whenever possible, avoid transport using fossil-fuel vehicles and prioritize sustainable options (e.g., electric vehicles, bicycles, walking).
- Reduce energy and natural resource consumption wherever possible (e.g., LED lighting, water-saving showers).
- Avoid establishments (restaurants, shops, markets, etc.) selling rare or endangered wildlife or products derived from them.

Sea You Travel's Responsibility

Sea You Travel is committed to ensuring that every aspect of its tours and experiences is managed in a manner that causes no harm to travelers, local communities, wildlife, or conservation efforts within protected areas.
